Plus a ton of other shows, past and during Spring 2021: Big Brother Canada 9 Summer 2021: Big Brother 23 They've woken up around 9am to tell us goodbye. Enzo lives in bed, having been late emphasising and nervous. Cody said he wants us to do a Twitter vote for how much we'll miss each of them. He apologized to us for constantly stubborn his snot, for screaming, for a silly voice, and to chew. He knows how we react to this stuff, but doesn't care until this morning. Nicole also apologized for chewing, and for pulling on her wedgies. She also says she loves us. I don't know if he'll feel the same after learning he's missing some sponsors. Enzo eventually woke up and apologized for being a vulgar, for a bad acronym, and that BB12 Enzo came out a little bit at the end after hiding him most of the season. And then at 10am the BB22 feed came and ended, and they were gone. The finale begins with Part 2 - after the recap, of course. It was called Hogs Camera, and Cody and Enzo had to (separately) answer the trivia season by putting a hamster cut into the postcard, then crossing the balance beam to hang the piggies out of the way so no one would appear in the final shot. It's a fun comp to watch. The Times is 4:49 for Cody, and 37:38 for Enzo. They showed some of Enzo's anger/frustration afterwards, which were withheld from feeds like many of the year's key moments, we hear about it. Next up is the jury's roundtable, which has no leader/thinker coach/moderator this time, almost certainly caused by viral protocols. And/or because Dr Will is busy doing Thriller dance. Christmas joined them and they did their reshaling. I zoned out and my eyes layered for most of it because I season reconciliated to death. My apology. Capture playback when they post an episode in All Access if you details. Then came Part 3, entitled Vinyl Exam: Nicole versus Cody and a series of eight music-themed videos about each juror. Again it was a trivia season rather than the crasphoot they all expected, or some version of the juror who said what I expected. They had to answer which of the three statements about each season of jurists was false, and they were very detailed. Nicole missed the first (about Ian), and both got all the other right, meaning Cody won the HOH final by one. Nicole's speeches and Enzo's keep-me both stressed that they were with Cody from the start, making it awkward for all, and there were tears from all three. Cody evicts Nicole, and that means Enzo doesn't catch anyone who cuts it as he has promised, and his ex doesn't have to turn the kids off the TV as he asks, should that come to pass. Nicole was clearly shocked and had a tough time with her exit interview at first, but she pulled out together. Juror wasn't on stage with Julie but somewhere in the Big Brother bubble for each of her. They asked their questions, coins between Cody and Enzo. I paraphrased the questions and answers in the Twitter thread but again, check out the archive episode for more detail. Nothing is more important, although Nicole says she can't see Cody to ask why Enzo isn't her. He says he went and back very much, and I believe that he did, although he wasn't nearly as vocal with his thoughts last week as Nicole and Enzo respectively. Both provided a pretty good response but Cody was more articulate and thorough than Enzo. The same goes for their finalist speeches. Both make good points but again, Cody's speech is more articulate and better planned than Enzo. Keywheel makes annual appearances and jurors put their keys in their slots. Pre-jurors appeared through zoom meetings, and they actually had a nice little backwards with Julie, something that often didn't happen in the finale and it was a good use of some and a half hours of that extra, in my opinion. That's until Julie asked Kaysar why she couldn't rally outsiders to oppose aligned power players, and that brought back all the pain what this season might have been but not. Oh good. Cody won the season on a unanimous 9-0 vote, two finals out of habitat to greet the coach, and the confetti flew. Da'Vonne won the audience's favourite award, and she was obviously excited, as she should. A few final notes: both Cody nor Enzo were nominated all season, a pretty impressive performance for one let alone the two Cody is the first OTEV winner to win this season, so that the series is over. And Da'Vonne was the first African-American to win the audience's favourite prize. Great goes and congratulates all of them! And thanks as always to every 16 hamsters for putting themselves out there for our entertainment again, especially since they all know already how crazy these fans are. There are not many strategies and and Not much entertainment so fans of both BB corners disappear large, but we get the season when all the odds against it happen at all as a result of COVID-19. And as always, thank you! To keep visiting the site and to get your feed here, and especially to you that sent me goofs, pink, comedy, good words, and donations! We have another one under our BB belt :) And PS: I'm going to add more face masks to my Etsy site in the coming days and weeks, and some cushions of holiday round too! Final reminder, if you missed what came before, check out my previous episode, always linked above or from my season index, and get a video to catch whatever you missed with Flashback! The amount of cash won doesn't include a $40k offer fee or a weekly stipend, but includes the top five bonuses See full bios in the cast folder at hamsterwatch Forum Noms count: original/renom/credit twist where necessary: they plan this season under lockdown conditions and they pull it off with whom knows how many viral protocols and associated customizations I missed all the big and close shots from the camera operators on the wall but I knew it was caused by fewer staff on site, and I could have missed all the big and close shots from the camera operator on the wall but I knew it was caused by fewer staff on site, and I could have missed all the big and close shots from the camera operator on the wall but I knew it was caused by fewer staff on site, and I could have And they give us a direct move, and highly appreciated the first night/first week of feed. We have some classic compasses and some new ones, including my personal favorite, amazing hamster wheel veto. But the problem outweighs the virtues, with many. The actors' issues aside, they were detained feeding more than ever, with Canadian BB levels contagious. Canadian BBs are always rotten to their fans but at least their feeds are free. There's no excuse for how much the BB22 is blocked from us this year, including some very important conversations like Christmas/Tyler one, which is further reaching implications and interests than this TV show. Overview, they need to correct what is broken here including stale casting formula and racism it tends to bring with it. Predictable and disappointing twists, crazy Diary segments include repetitive and cynical comp retells, gameplay levels of Thrones video darkness and very poor feed audio, not to mention the obvious way TOO loud music, and an obvious overall dedication to feed: their most loyal audience. They have to go back to the social experiments this show aims to be, with a unique personality rather than kind of. And please, can we keep religious views to religious shows? Besides offensive to many, it just seems silly to hype and praise lying down and backstabbing, and then teaching goodness moto cliché incongruous. Won: $500,000HOH 4 - Veto 4 - Noms 0/0/0 - HN winner 2 9-0. Day 85 He doesn't look much different than his last stint, and he doesn't act like he'll mature either. He still strongly snot all the time, and he spoke with a bad actose for days at the end, and randomly got very screaming for no reason, all annoying. Equally annoying is that its tongue always get out of his mouth and sprinkle 'like' a dozen times into each sentence. She is liked by most of them most of the time, partly because of being casual and friendly in general, and partly for using the first HOH to her social advantage. Like most of them, he acted entitled to be there and to win, and while he won many compasses, he had a relatively simple run because he never sat on the blocks. He promised both Enzo and Nicole that he would take them to an end if the choice was him, but rather than potentially repeating the BB16 mistake, he took that he was more definitely to beat, and so he did. He earned his victory, and it was only the third unanimous vote in our history, after Dan Gheesling and Tamar Braxton. Win: $50,000. Safety Suite #3HOH 2 - Veto 1 - Noms 0/0/0 - HN 2 Runner-up, Day 85 It is good to see him back and to learn the sense of humour still intact and even upgraded slightly into less potentially problematic than last time. Her social game is fantastic, as she is friendly to all and friends with most, and as a result she has never been nominated. But that seems to be the only strategy and while he gets Kaysar out on his early HOH, there is a far greater threat he can and should have focused on. Instead he went to an end as he did before but he didn't do it with two solid teams this time. He didn't have much contact with Nicole and he would send him out third again, but he stayed tight with Cody and it paid to at least sit in the final two seats. She doesn't cheat on Have-not this year and actually enjoys it as a diet plan, and she turns Ricolas into a dessert mint. He seems a good guy, devoted to his children, and a constant and one-liner patter helps keep the food alive. Win: $20,000; 1 week SLOPPIES boxHOH 1 - Veto 1 - Noms 3/0/0 - HN 2 9th, 14th epidemic, Day 85 He spent much of the first week in tears or complaining, mostly about Janelle. He seems to fall into a coalition that keeps it safe, or maybe that's all pre-set - we'll never know. He didn't win any tilted comps of the end but he did some driving, mostly by the victim's combo himself and beautified his target, which was somehow effective. The target is usually personal - because of the jokes here, vote there, another showed a few years ago. And a laugh about Ian being mocked got him released by some sponsors. He and Ian had the first pinkyswear of the season, on Day 3, but he broke that F2 with whom the vote lies had greater implications of deportation. He's not fess about it but the wall seller spilled the truth. He's in a meeting with Dani but he's also not, and he's tight with Cody from the beginning, and mostly gets along with each other, but he doubles up a lot and cuts it in the end. He said he deserved to win many times in his lectures to himself and us, but third place for the third time was not too shaky. He broke the record for most days indoors, and most of the clothes he wore, and he would win the Deathrace a third time but I let him let him this year's death chart due to a chart of viral deaths taking over the hashtag. Win: $12,500; Safety Suite #2; Safety Suits #3 (Enzo win)/1 week baby star; Power Blocker Underground / unusedHOH 1 - Veto 2 - Noms 3/1/0 - HN 2 8th, 13th epidemic, Day 79 Kevin puts his best: he says he's got a lot of demons he doesn't deal with, but he preaches like he has. She added the birth of her son to spin, a repertoire commute topic centered at Christmas that we heard last time. He often talks about his therapy but never mentions it has been ordered court, and despite endless convoys about himself he never brought his felony car-ramming allegations. He raged I'd be shot shortly before nominating Bayleigh and Da'Vonne, but he hugged them and cried after he did. Then steamed out of his ears in a major fight this season, compared to both of them, after he rejected Tyler's 'send me home' appeal. He advertised a 'comp beast' but didn't deliver, he was a snotty winner and was very ill losing, and he still didn't have empathy or humility. Win: $5,000; Power replay (from Dani)HOH 3 - Veto 1 - Noms 1/0/0 - HN 1 7th, 12th epidemic, Day 72 He fell flat on his face at the premiere and he lost his anger in a big way at the beginning when the BB wouldn't turn off Have-not lights. He wasn't as big at the pre-nom meeting as HOH, and he advertised the 'secret plan' that convoluted a week, which turned out what to expect: get David out. He had to David for no good reason before that, and he caused waves outside our BB world by allegedly using the word n. He had back pain for weeks and then sore legs, so he hovered around a lot. He was early on for bed and early to rise up, and had a reputation there and beyond here as an elderly grandpa man, although he was rightly middle-aged clever in the actor. He and Christmas were tied up in later weeks and the 'Memphmas' fanatic was the highlight of his last week. Win: $5,000HOH 2 - Veto 2 - Noms 1/0/1 - HN 1 6th, 11th epidemic, Day 65 He again makes several F2s, and lands in various interconnected versions of the superpower alliance. He and Bayleigh worked their issues and fell apart again several times, and he trashed with Dani, a bad combo for him above the beginning david told-all faux PAS. He showed some qualifications to win this season, but he told Bayleigh and Da'Vonne that he would ask Christmas to replace him for one of them so he could return home pre-jury, quoting BLM as 'something bigger' they played for, but with Christmas is a shame on hold from a feed so we won't know how it really can't be presented. He bashed us feedsters, and he played hard if desperate at times, but his streak comp wasn't there and he wasn't on the ground floor pre-season to get to an end. Win: $5,000; Slope pass, home gys; Underground Replay Power / used on MemphisHOH 1 - Veto 0 - Noms 1/0/0 - HN 1 5th, 10th epidemic, 58th Day He says he wants to take the BB Queen Janelle crown, but instead he might damage the BB BB Not only did he not win compass like before, but he failed to bring about the entertainment factor. To be fair, he didn't irritate and complained as much as the previous season, but he came close. He's either not pre-game well or he changes his mind as soon as he sees who all is there, and when he talks too long about turning his allies around, it's his destruction. He had to nominate four people in his disastrous HOH week, and accidentally decided not to refuse to go when he had him on the block, although his original plan for the week was to boot him out of the back door. Win: $10,000; Underground disturbance/ giving himself Immunity Week 6HOH 0 - Veto 0 - Noms 4/0/0 - HN 2 4th juror, 9th epidemic, Day 58 He got a lot of debris for not being 'all stars' but many of them technically didn't, and he deserved another shot more than most of the first boots. He went further than expected, but that was mostly due to a power group shuffle rather than his own act, other than rescuing himself with the power of Disorder. But he blew that up with a fake and bad-laced cry, and he caused some rants when he took $10k instead of a veto in OTEV. He was an uncertain player, often seemingly brilliant and didn't know at the same time, but he eventually worked himself into a good social position against many possibilities, not least being Nicole's vote lies. But Memphis finally got under way and got him away. Win: NothingHOH 0 - Veto 1 - Noms 5/0/0 - HN 2 3rd juror, 8th epidemic, 58th Day He went on the block at the start and never recovered. He wouldn't forgive former idol Janelle than preferred Keesha to stay in the first week so she tattooed on her, which helped destroy all the hopes of an outsider appealing together to take the dominant power pact. Then he became a pawn star and was nominated four more times, winning just one veto himself and once benefiting from Da'Vonne's victory. He spends too much time trying to analyze who with whom, sometimes accurate but often out of date, and he doesn't do anything about it anyway. He is perky and snarky at Diary, but on feeds he is mostly miserable and mopey, rarely out of his Eeyore world. Win: $30,000HOH 0 - Veto 1 - Noms 2/0/0 - HN 2 FAVORITE AUDIENCE WINNER2, 7th epidemic, 51st Day Winning BB is a goal he has not achieved, but he is very successful with his other goals, to raise awareness of the extra challenge Black hamsters face in this game. Those goals contradicted when David polluted confidence and again when he believed Nicole blamed her vote on David. Win: Safety Suite #1HOH 0 - Veto 0 - Noms 2/0 - HN 1 4th epidemic, Day 30 of his BB strategy plan always holds promise but executes it, not so much. But it doesn't matter: he is and is a class act, and he always brings the kind of much-needed humanity our feed is usually lacking in a big way. It's too bad things don't work out differently this time but it's great to see him on our feed again, good for himself and for a fun friendship with Janelle. Win: Safety Suit #1 (Kaysar's victory)/1 week starHOH 0 - Veto 0 - Noms 1/0 - HN 1 3 evicted, Day 23 It's great to see it on feed again, especially his simple friendship with Kaysar. He is Janelle's BB6 again but anonymously calls your face that will make things more enjoyable for us, but props to him for not going there. It was shocking how hard he was targeted just to show, proof that Janellosy was still real. Win: NothingHOH 0 - Veto 0 - Noms 1/0 - HN 1 2 expelled, Day 16 Imagine taking place at BB and not wanting to work with Janelle and Kaysar. Have them to go bat for you, hard, and then throw them back in their faces. It's mind-boggling. He's on his way over his head this season, making a bad decision after another, and he repeatedly promised us home that he never delivered. Won: NothingHOH 0 - Veto 0 - Noms 1/0 - HN 0 1 epidemic, Day 9 He is his first time feisty around but like all of them, he's older and more mature now, and his birthday happens before they move in, so we don't get any unforgettable new Keesha scenes. But it was good to see him again and he got a nice check for two weeks of isolation and one week of summer camp.
